

NEWS IMAGES PEOPLE SPORT TECH LIFE PROPERTY ARTS + ENTS TRAVEL MONEY INDYBEST STUDENT OFFERS

INDEPENDENT VOICES

FIND BY WRITER / COMMENT / EDITORIALS / LETTERS / IV DRIP / CAMPAIGNS / ARCHIVE / BLOGS

HOT TOPICS / ISRAEL-GAZA CONFLICT / ASSISTED DYING / OBESITY

Friday 8 February 2008

Leading article: An oppressive system that is failing our children

SHARE

The first significant and independent study of Britain's primary schools since the 1967 Plowden Report has exposed just how widespread the

Search The Independent

Advanced Search | Article archive | Topics

0

Share

0

Tweet

Share

0

Share

Reddit

0

Share

culture of testing has become within our education system. The Primary Review, overseen by the Faculty of Education at the University of Cambridge, found that primary school children in England were subjected to far more assessment than their peers in other developed countries. According to the report, external testing in England takes place more frequently, begins at a younger age, and covers more subjects than testing in schools overseas. It is also a more "high stakes" system than any other comparable educational system, which means that the fortunes of schools are heavily bound up with how pupils perform in their assessment tests.

This is unlikely to surprise parents, who have long been complaining that their school-age children seem to be on a never-ending treadmill of assessments and exams. There are nationwide statutory tests for children at ages seven and 11. At secondary school, this is followed by further tests at age 14, and then GCSEs and A-levels at 16-plus. It is little wonder that there has been a considerable backlash against compulsory testing.

Some national testing is, of course, necessary. And, as the report shows, all developed countries have some system for measuring attainment before pupils sit major public exams in their teens. Schools must be held to account. If pupils are not progressing as well as those elsewhere this

RELATED TOPICS

Mathematics

Oecd

Primary School

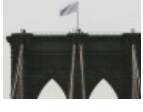

i100 BETA NOW TRENDING

-

1 There's a straight white guy festival, because when will they catch a break?
-

2 Just where exactly are Gazans supposed to evacuate to?
-

3 Sixteen hacks to get you through summer
-

4 Lib Dem tries to defend David Ward by focusing on 'disputatious Jews'
-

5 Two white flags placed atop Brooklyn Bridge but no one knows how or why pupils are not progressing as well as those elsewhere, this must be brought to light. Too often in the past, failure was concealed by insufficient assessment.

But the pendulum has swung too far in the other direction. Many teachers find themselves doing little else than priming and preparing pupils for the next round of tests. This stifles creativity and is a terrible way to engender a love of learning among children. The system is also counter-productive from an educational perspective. Pupils are increasingly being "taught to the test". They become adept at jumping through hoops but not at thinking for themselves. As an Ofsted report on maths teaching in secondary schools put it: "Although students are able to pass the examinations, they are not able to apply their knowledge independently to new contexts, and they are not well prepared for further study."

At the heart of the problem is the fact that our testing culture appears to be politically, rather than educationally, driven. Government ministers like tests and the constant stream of results they produce because it enables them, in their dealings with the media, to point to rising educational standards. The publishing of school "league tables" is another political, rather than educational, tool. These exist so that ministers can claim credit for schools "moving up" the tables. But these ranking tables merely force teachers and headteachers to concentrate on tests to the detriment of other aspects of school life. The testing culture is thus a product of two of this Government's greatest vices: an obsession with presentation and an instinct towards top-down control.

Just because other countries do things differently does not make it right that we should emulate them. But the evidence suggests many other nations are doing a better job of educating young people than us. According to latest figures from the Organisation for Economic Co-Operation and Development, Britain has been slipping down the international table for quality of learning in maths and reading. Complacency is entirely inappropriate.

THE CITY IS YOURS TO NAVIGATE

NEW

HOT

COMMENTED

i Editor's letter: Summer holidays are here... so what to do with the children?

The daily catch-up: knitting, why Ed wants to be PM and a colloquium of Indy-pedants

It would be wrong to compare brave Tulisa's ordeal with phone hacking. It's much worse than that Teachers are against constant testing. Parents are dissatisfied with the pressure it puts on pupils. Examiners are also unhappy. Ken Boston, the chief executive of the Qualifications and Curriculum Authority, has suggested moving towards a sampling system. The only players still clinging to the wreckage of the present testing arrangements are ministers. It is time for them to let go. ■

REACT NOW

What became of Cameron's Big Society Network?

Alex Salmond must speak out against the Commonwealth's homophobic countries

Promoted stories

Don't Let Road Gators Bite
(Allstate Blog)

9 Surprising Celebs Who Served in the Military (Grandparents.com)

Paula Abdul Travels to Israel to Celebrate Late in Life Bat Mitzvah!
(Blinkx)

Michelle Obama's mixed race heritage proved by DNA.
(Ancestry.com)

The Queen Of Mean: 15 Times Michelle Obama Was A Very Angry First Lady --...
(Radar Online)

Netanyahu: This is the cruelest, most grotesque war I've ever seen
(FOX Business)

More from The Independent

Who's watching television?

Silvio Berlusconi's latest appeal and a string of paedophilia and rape...

Lena Dunham and Girls is a triumph for real nudity

Recommended by Outbrain

PROMOTED STORIES

This Awesome Mom Went to Graduation... (Take Part)

It's not Junk: The Most Overlooked... (Reader's Digest)

27 Foods You Should Never Buy Again (Reader's Digest)

World's largest tank collection sold... (CNNMoney)

40's Apartment Left Un-touched for... (BoredLion)

The Most Amazing, Hilarious... (Perfectly Timed Pictures)

Recommended by outbrain

SPONSORED FEATURES

Topman: Tips from top stylists

Shop London has teamed up with Topman. View the latest film clips shot at Topman Oxford Circus, plus your chance to win a £1,500 voucher.

Win a holiday The Gambia London Trend
Cycling Holiday wardrobe Specsavers
#editme Prizes & offers Business videos

RELATED ARTICLES

Testing of pupils at 11 has 'serious negative effect'

First strike at one of Michael Gove's flagship free schools suspended after it agrees to enter contract negotiations

Government to set stricter new literacy and numeracy targets in primary schools

Children should be taught skills to make them employable from primary school age, suggests Chambers of Commerce

Schools to publish what they teach children about sex, drugs and alcohol

Get the best in opinion from Independent Voices, straight to your inbox every Thursday lunchtime.

SUBSCRIBE

Ads by Google

Wire Money to the UK

Send up to $2,999 for just $4.99 Locked-In Exchange Rate. Send Now!

www.xoom.com/unitedkingdom

AncestryDNA™ Test

Discover Your Ethnicity w/ Just One Test From The Comfort of Home.

ancestry.com/DNA

Right to Pray?

Should the First Amendment protect prayer in schools? Vote here!

townhall.com/prayer

iJobs

Business Development Manager (District Heating)

£55000 Per Annum plus company car and bonus scheme: The Green Recruitment Comp...

Business Analyst - Banking - Scotland - £380-£480

£380 - £480 per day: Orgtel: Business Analyst - Banking - Edinburgh - £380 - ...

Lead Hand - QC

competitive: Progressive Recruitment: Lead Hand - QC Progressive are recruiting...

Chemical Engineer/Project Coordinator

£40000 - £45000 per annum + competitive: Progressive Recruitment: Chemical Eng...

View the latest from iJobs

DAY IN A PAGE

Sun | Mon | Tue | Wed | Thu | Fri | Sat

READ NEXT

i Editor's letter: Summer holidays are here... so what to do with the children?

OLIVER DUFF

The daily catch-up: knitting, why Ed wants to be PM and a colloquium of Indy-pedants

JOHN RENTOUL

Noel Fielding's
'Luxury Comedy'

What are the worst 'Word Crimes'?

The worst kept secret in cinema

The new hatched, matched and dispatched

Are you my type?

Search The Independent

- Advanced Search
- Article archive
- Topics

- Terms & Policies
- Privacy Policy
- Cookie policy
- Code of Conduct
- Complaint form
- Email newsletters
- RSS
- Live Blogs
- i100

- Contact Us
- Subscriptions
- Apps
- Work for us
- Evening Standard
- Homes & Property
- iJobs

- Advertising Guide
- Syndication
- Novaya Gazeta (English)
- ES Business Connections
- ES Rentals
- London Live

© independent.co.uk